

Anonymous Call

Yesterday sent city policemen and federalized Arkansas National Guardsmen on a 1½-hour search. They found the dynamite, which had no cap or fuse, in an otherwise empty locker.

The Justice Department said at Washington last night that the FBI would find out whether any federal law had been violated.

The telephone caller's tip said two sticks of dynamite had been placed at the school but only one was found.

An explosives expert said it was possible but difficult to set off unfused, uncapped dynamite.

It was the second bomb scare in recent days at the school. Where nine Negro students were hospitalized under the protection of federal troops Sept. 25. Last Thursday night federalized guardsmen combed the huge building in an unsuccessful search for explosives after an anonymous call.

School Supt. Virgil T. Blossom told a news conference several hours after the dynamite discovery that he considered it a terror weapon aimed at shutting the doors of the school to all students. Blossom said he definitely planned to keep Central High open.

He said the dynamite incident appeared to be part of a campaign to try to force closing of the 2,000-pupil school, and added that police, FBI and military authorities agreed with this view.

About 25 federalized guardsmen were stationed at Central High School on each class day. They are part of the last 432 guardsmen still on duty in connection with the integration crisis.

Blossom said yesterday that no increase in the number of troops on guard at Central High was anticipated.

He also said: "Every precaution is being taken for the safety of the children and at the same time carry on their educational program."

A segregationist leader last night attacked Blossom's news conference statements about the dynamite incident.

Rev. Wesley Pruden Sr., Baptist minister and president of the segregation-minded Capital Citizens Council expressed resentment over what he termed Blossom's implication that segregation forces were trying to increase the number of troops at Central High.

He said any such implication was untrue and that his segregationist group did not wish to see any school closed.

The minister blamed Blossom as the chief instigator of tension at Central High and called for his resignation.

He also recommended that the city school board's members Central High Principal Jess W. Matthews and two school-vice principals band in their resignations.

Blossom said he did not intend to resign.

Later, the minister told a meeting of the segregationist League of Central High Mothers that the city as going to get a new school board and a new set of school administrators.

"Don't ask me how that's my business," he said.

He also said: "I'm going to get everybody on the other side. I am not for violence but I am for driving all of those from public office who are against us."

LULL ON THE RANGE—Judging from the looks of things, Danny Collins, 2½, is entitled to a little shuteye. It must have been a fierce battle. Even though "Tex" Duck patrols at the rear, Danny, in old west tradition, keeps his hand on a six-shooter as he sleeps, and has the rest of his arsenal, including a tommy gun, close by. Danny lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Bernice Collins, who caught him napping and summoned a photographer. Nancy Jack, of the Kansas City Kansan, managed to take this picture and get away without being gunned down.

Ike's Views at Odds With U. S. Advisers
By SAM DAWSON

NEW YORK (AP)—President Eisenhower's views of the extent and probable timetable of the business recession are at odds with those of some economic advisers of industry.

As presented in Monday's Economic report, the President holds: 1. The slump began sooner and hit harder than his advisers had told him to expect and presumably with the timetable stepped up, the recovery should come earlier, too.

2. Some chief strong points in the economy haven't been hit much and will quickly outweigh those that were — with two new factors, enlarged defense spending and recently liberalized credit, already being felt.

"The administration is counting on a reversal in the business and employment trends before the end of the year," he said.

Harley shrugged plump shoulders. "In my business a man has to keep up appearances. But what is this about a young lady's trunk?"

"A quite attractive young lady," Sebastian told him dryly. "Miss Ashland. She was on her way to Fort Klamath, but military necessity blocked that plan. So, for the present she is a guest at my ranch. Tell me, how's law and crime?"

Harley's eyes narrowed a trifle as though he was not entirely sure but that a touch of ironic sarcasm lay behind Sebastian's seemingly casual questions.

"We've plenty to do, Mr. Biglow and I. There are some hints that Mr. Biglow may be called upon to set up proceedings of arbitration between the government and those Modocs."

"To late for that," declared Sebastian flatly. "Successful arbitration requires some degree of trust, and those Modocs have long since found out, to their bitter cost, that it doesn't pay to trust the white man. No, Harley, there will be no arbitration."

"That suits me," Riller said. "I'm sick and tired of any and all mawkish concern for the Modocs. Clean them out, I say, once and for all. They're not worth wasting time or sympathy on!"

Ward Sebastian looked the ro-tund lawyer over with chilling glance, and his tone went crisp. "Harley, I've heard you say that before. You're blood thirsty, aren't you?"

Crimson suffused Harley Riller's well-fed cheeks. "Can't you do anything but take the part of those useless stinking savages? What kind of a white man are you, anyhow?"

Ward Sebastian watched Harley Riller swell and crimson with anger, saw the streak of inherent meanness in the man rise and display itself. Abruptly he dropped all pretense of friendliness or gentleness.

"Not your kind, Riller," he said.

"The defendant, Ethel Brown and husband, C. F. Brown, and my known heirs of Ethel Brown, deceased, warned to appear in this court within thirty days and answer the complaint of the Plaintiff Anita Stuart Terrell."

WARNING ORDER
The defendants, Ethel Brown and husband, C. F. Brown, and my known heirs of Ethel Brown, deceased, warned to appear in this court within thirty days and answer the complaint of the Plaintiff Anita Stuart Terrell.

Witness my hand and the seal of said court this 9th day of January 1958.

The bellow of that shot did things to men in the room. Some it startled to immobility, others it stamped. A teamster, down-buried a couple of yards, was one of these. Understanding nothing but the implied import of a gun's trapped roar, he let out a howl, reared up and charged wildly for the door. In passing, his bulky shoulder clipped Jake Ruby, spinning him completely around, and blocking Ruby's change for a second easy shot at Sebastian.

On his part, still moving to the left under the impulse of that first desperate lunge, Ward Sebastian was staggering at the gun and shouting across the threshold.

Kansas City Area Hal Boyle

whipped drifts three to six feet deep across highways and all east-west roads in northeast Kansas were blocked. These included U.S. 40, 24 and 36. North-south highways were icy and hazardous.

Conditions in northwest Missouri were almost as bad but the Missouri Highway Patrol reported cars with chains and snow tires could get through.

In some suburban sections of Kansas City, nothing was moving. Snow plow crews worked on the main streets all night but the wind whipped the snow right back.

Five to 12 inches of snow fell yesterday as the storm moved across Kansas and southern Nebraska into Missouri and Iowa.

The area of heavy snow warnings includes northeast Kansas, northwest and extreme northern Missouri, the southeast half of Iowa, northern and extreme northern Illinois, southeast and extreme southern Wisconsin and the south and central portions of lower Michigan.

At the leading edge of the storm rains spread eastward across the Appalachians to the Atlantic Coast.

The Northeast was earmarked for worsening weather with the onslaught of a rain and sleet mixture early in the day. This was to be followed by light snow. Weather Bureau forecasters said.

A low pressure area over southern Texas shifted into the lower Mississippi Valley.

Bad weather also was reported in the Pacific Northwest where scattered showers or snow flurries were predominant features.

More cautious outsiders fear that this slight dip will become more pronounced between now and Fourth of July.

In industry the guessing was along that line, too, until recently.

Now a handful, doubtless impressed by the earlier timetable of the slump and the changes in public thinking wrought by Sputnik, thinks the turn will come with Easter.

But many have switched their ideas from midsummer to sometime around Thanksgiving or Christmas.

When looking at any guessing along those lines these days, remember: This is an election year. And in and out of Washington one side will stress anything that makes the business and employment picture look bad, perhaps even worse than it is. The other side will call attention to the strong points and glow with optimism about the chances for a big new upsurge before the November voting.

Most nongovernment economists and business leaders agree that greater defense spending will boost certain affected industries, and that if credit is liberalized to the point where borrowing costs turn notably lower other forms of spending will be boosted, particularly spending by the state and local governments.

But the more cautious think the real turn will be signaled by the durable goods industries. When the current phase of trimming inventories ends, when capital goods makers report their backlog of orders has stopped falling and new orders have started to appear again in volume on their books, then the new business boom will have been born.

The President points confidently to a strong consumer demand, sustained to a large degree by the fact that so far there has been only a small decline in total income and hence in total buying power.

The President also counts on rising outlays by state and local governments and on increased private spending on research and development. But he lays great stress on strong business confidence as shown in long range corporate programs for expansion and construction.

Business leaders go right along with this on the long term phase of the economy.

But what worries them is the fairly sharp cut in plans for such spending this year; the evidence of wavering confidence shown by the hand to mouth ordering of retailers and wholesalers as well as the trimming of manufacturing inventories; and the lack of confidence shown by many stock market traders, with its repercussions on public psychology.

Everyone hopes the President is right—but some are waiting to see.

Italian dialects he said, "Get behind the wheel. Let's go."

"I didn't know what that would mean to me—or I might have kept my mouth shut. We lived on the front line. We were in tight squeezes all the time."

"The Colonel liked to do his own reconnoitering for his night attacks. When we couldn't go any further by jeep, we'd climb aboard donkeys. And when we got to places in the hills where even the donkeys balked, we'd jump off and go on by foot."

Contrera remembers later in Italy how, day after day, he had to speed his jeep across a 75-yard open area of road swept by machinegun fire.

"The colonel got a kick out of timing the enemy fire and beating the bullets kicking up dust behind us, but nothing ever bothered him. And, somehow, I felt safe with him."

Only one time did Darby ever lose his composure. That was at Cisterna, on the Anzio beachhead, when a German division surrounded and largely destroyed two battalions of Rangers as he was trying to break through to their rescue.

"Don't give up. Infiltrate back," Darby kept pleading into the field phone. "Don't give up! Don't give up! Don't give up!"

"When he was told the men couldn't infiltrate back because they were trapped," said Contrera, "the colonel put his head down on his arm and cried for several moments. He broke down. He had always put the safety of his men first, and he couldn't stand the thought of what was happening to them."

"But, none of us ever blamed him. It wasn't his fault."

The last time Contrera ever saw Darby was when the colonel came to Camp Butler in North Carolina.

"He never made a speech to us—just talked to us one by one, or in small groups. He was very sad."

After 11 months on the Army general staff in Washington, Darby returned to the Italian front as deputy commander of the 10th Mountain Division. A German shell killed him soon after, as he was inspecting frontline positions.

"I have never before or since, looked up to a man as I did to him," said Contrera. "After his death they made him a brigadier general, and that was nice of them. He was all soldier."

Recent court decisions have thrown a cloud of uncertainty around tax responsibility of cooperatives for some types of earnings passed on to their patrons.

Snow Falls In Parts of Arkansas

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Show fell in north Arkansas last night and today, making highways dangerous and forcing the closing of a few schools.

The U. S. Weather Bureau said yesterday the accumulation of snow might reach six inches, but none of that depth had been reported today.

At Rogers 1 1/2 inches of snow was on the ground and it still was snowing at 10 a.m. Streets in Rogers were hazardous.

Snow began at Harrison about 6:30 a.m. and stopped at 9:30 a.m. The temperature there was 25 degrees at 10 a.m.

The Weather Bureau said temperatures will turn colder tonight. Highs this afternoon were expected to be in the 30s throughout the state, with lows tonight ranging from 15 degrees in the areas where snow fell to the 20s elsewhere.

DOROTHY DIX

was given.

Hostesses were Mrs. J. S. Moses and Mrs. A. M. Wimmell. The February meeting will feature a program on Health.

Coming and Going

Guests in the J. C. Prescott home in McCaskey over the weekend were Mrs. Prescott's brother and family, Mr. and Mrs. Asa Denton and two sons and her mother, Mrs. Alice Denton all of Belton, Texas. Mrs. Prescott's aunt, Mrs. Bertha Smallwood of Belton, Texas and a sister and her family, Mr. and Mrs. O. T. Blackwood and Betty Sue of Camden.

Dear Dorothy Dix: My husband passed away a few months ago, and it is financially necessary for me to return to work. Although I am 57, I had no trouble getting a job, but I do have one problem. How long must a widow wear black? I feel that my job demands more cheerful colors than black but my friends are horrified at the thought of my giving up my mourning clothes. Times have changed, haven't they? JANCIE Bolor, Texas. They sure have. Where have your friends been while the wheel of time and fashion turned? You'd never make a welcome employee if you wore depressing black all the time. That's all right for those who sit home and mourn, but not for a gal who has to earn her own living. Clothes have nothing to do with how one feels, or how one misses the dead. Grief is a purely personal matter, and must be individually expressed. You can pack up your widow's weeds, but you'll never put away memories.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Ever since starting high school I have been told by teachers and fellow students that I am always looking for attention from the teachers. Perhaps they are right but I can't see it. However, if I have this name tag, I am willing to do anything to correct it. Can you suggest something for me? TRIXIE are struggling to monopolize teachers' attention. The best cure is to make yourself realize that you are only one of many pupils who need it. Look on yourself as part of a whole, not as the star attraction. In time, this would come about naturally, but since you've become noted for this quick, the time to kill it is now.

Dear Dorothy Dix: I've been going with a boy for one month, three weeks and one day. Most of that time we've been going steady. Last night I discovered that he had been giving me a phony name. He finally told me what his real name was. I was very mad, and don't know whether to forgive and forget, or break up with him. NANCY

Dear Nancy: There's no justifiable reason for a boy's giving a fictitious name and I would find

Suspended Student to Get Hearing

LITTLE ROCK, Mo. — The Little Rock School Board will comply with a white mother's request for a hearing on the suspension of her daughter from Central High School.

Supl. Virgil T. Blossom said yesterday that a hearing would be held but he did not know when.

Mrs. Fred Gist mother of 17-year-old Darlene Holloway had threatened to go to court unless she got a hearing attended by her daughter and attorney.

The girl was suspended Jan. 10 after a pushing incident involving a Negro girl student.

It very hard to trust him now. Certainly, you don't know him well enough to be going steady or you'd have known his right name. This sounds like a silly friendship. Break it up.

Dear Dorothy Dix: Although Harry has been dating me for some months, he doesn't want me to get serious over him. He says marriage is not for him. I like him a lot, but am afraid to tell him. I'm 27, he's 28. GERRY

Dear Gerry: Go husband hunting in greener pastures. A girl's wasting her time on a man who declares he's not for marriage. He probably has other things in mind, which are not for you.

Send your problems to Dorothy Dix. Be sure to enclose a stamped, self-addressed envelope and address her care of this newspaper.

Calhoun Goes Down Before Spider Webb

SAN FRANCISCO (AP)—One mistake and a right hand smash had Tough Spider Webb moving toward the top of the M-W-Boxing picture today.

Aggressive Rory Calhoun, the muscular 160-pounder from White Plains, N. Y., made the mistake and Webb took full advantage of it to whip home a stunning fourth round knockout.

Calhoun had knocked down the 158 1/2 pound Chicagoan for counts of 9 in both the first and second rounds of their Cow Palace battle. Then came a more even third and the decisive fourth.

Webb, noted more as a boxer than a puncher, caught Calhoun coming in with a perfect right to the jaw and the favored Rory went down for a count of nine.

Calhoun wobbled to his feet, but went down again under Webb's attack.

Referee Jack Downey started a count, saw Calhoun was through and awarded Webb the knockout. The knockout was the first suffered by the 23-year-old Calhoun, who went into the fight with a 32-2-1 record.

It was the 14th time Webb had stopped an opponent and sent his record to 24-2.

Akins, DeMarco Meet in Boston

BOSTON (AP)—Cagey Virgil Akins and tough Tony De Marco, a pair of explosive punchers campaigning for the welterweight title, met again tonight in a scheduled 15-round rematch of one of Boston's most spectacular ring brawls.

The second meeting of the fighting church deacon from St. Louis and the blocky slugger from Boston shapes up as another slugfest.

"Tony is a tough fighter with a lot of guts, but I should have an easier time," said the 26-year-old Akins who knocked out De Marco in the 14th round three months ago.

"I'm going to knock him out," said the 26-year-old De Marco who never before has publicly made such a prediction.

Despite his triumph last October, Akins is expected to enter the ring no better than an even money choice for defense of the Massachusetts version of the welterweight championship he won by knocking out De Marco.

Some Old Time Cards, New Ones Honored

ST. LOUIS (AP)—Some old-time St. Louis baseball players and a couple of recent ones were honored at a Baseball Writers' Assn. dinner last night as the all-time St. Louis baseball team.

Only one of the 13 living members of the 13-man squad was missing. Plither Dizzy Dean was absent because of a death in his family.

Two of the teams still are active: Stan Musial, right fielder on the all-star team, and now a Cardinal first baseman, and Red Schoendienst, all-star utility infielder and member of the world champion Milwaukee Braves.

The other all-timers were George Sisler, first base; Rogers Hornsby, second base; Marty Marion, shortstop; Frank Frisch, third base; Ken Williams, left field; Terry Moore, centerfield; Johnny Tobin, utility outfielder; Jesse Haines, pitcher, and catchers Bob O'Farrell and Hank Seaver.

Bob Burnes, sports editor of the Globe Democrat and one of the three toastmasters, called it "the greatest collection of baseball players ever assembled in one room."

The Sporting News manager-of-the-year award was presented to Cardinal pitcher Fred Hutchinson.

Catcher Sherman Lollar got the Rawlings Golden Glove for being the top defensive receiver in the majors last year.

Wilder's Best Seller on TV Tonight

By CHARLES MERCER

NEW YORK (AP)—Thirty years ago a then little known writer named Thornton Wilder published a novel entitled "The Bridge of San Luis Rey."

It was acclaimed by the critics, won a Pulitzer Prize and gradually took on the reputation of a "modern classic." Today it is generally forgotten that the novel was a tremendous best-seller and that two movies were made of it, a silent film and a 1937 sound movie.

Tonight "The Bridge of San Luis Rey" will be presented on television for the first time as the 90-minute "Show of the Month" (CBS-TV). It is expected to be one of the memorable TV productions of the season. Its large cast includes such stars as Judith Anderson, Hume Cronyn, Eva Le Gallienne and Viveca Lindfors. This is a dramatic story about a group of people who were killed when the finest bridge in Peru suddenly collapsed one July noon in 1714. It poses a searching question about man's fate. In the words of one of its characters, "Either we live by accident and die by accident, or we live by plan and die by plan."

It cannot, naturally, answer a question that has defied the philosophers of all the ages. As a work of art it can only suggest an answer—and it does. At its conclusion one of its characters says: "There is a land of the living and a land of the dead and the bridge is love, the only survival."

David Susskind, the able young producer of "Show of the Month," wisely realized that the form of the novel could not be duplicated effectively on television when he launched this ambitious undertaking.

In the adaptation by Ludi Clair the five separate stories of the novel are well woven together to give dramatic pace and rising tension to a story that would remain episodic if exactly duplicated on TV. Wilder has not had anything to do with the adaptation.

The live production, with no filmed bits, utilizes six cameras

The Spiritual Life Group of the First Methodist Church met on Wednesday morning in the home of Mrs. W. R. Hambright for the monthly meeting with sixteen members present.

Mrs. Alfred DeBlack called the meeting to order with sentence prayer after which she conducted the study on "Partners in Prayer."

Tri-Service Club Entertains Husbands

Members of the Tri-Service Club entertained their husbands with a chili supper on Wednesday evening in the home of Mrs. Carl Dalrymple, Mrs. Frank Halton, Mrs. Dick Bright and Mrs. Bob Reynolds were co-hostesses.

Covers were laid at small tables covered with red and white cloths centered with red candles. A white cloth embroidered with red flowers covered the dining table that held a central arrangement of dried flowers and fruit and candles in red apple holders. # Lasky First Film Titan to Leave Scene

By BOB THOMAS

(Second of three articles on Jesse Lasky)

HOLLYWOOD (AP)—Jesse Lasky was the first of a famous triumvirate to be erased from the Hollywood scene.

In January, 1914, Lasky joined with Samuel Goldwyn and Cecil B. DeMille to form the Jesse Lasky Feature Play Co. with himself as president. DeMille was sent westward from New York to find some sunshine in which to make "The Squaw Man."

Goldwyn, 75, and DeMille, 76, are still titans in the industry. Both are multimillionaires. Lasky, who died last week at 77, made and lost 12 millions. But it's doubtful if his former partners had as much fun.

Lasky was responsible for getting both into the movie business. Having graduated from a cornet act in vaudeville, he aimed to produce some plays. He discussed with a play broker, Mrs. I. C. DeMille, the possibility of her son William writing an opera for him. William was busy and successful, so Mrs. DeMille tried to sell her other son Cecil.

"I had no intention of entrusting my great idea to a lesser luminary than William," recalled Lasky, "and certainly not to an actor who had made a couple of stabs at playwriting."

But Cecil's mother was persistent and a meeting was arranged. Lasky outlined his proposed plot and DeMille's imagination caught fire. Together they created the operetta "California," which was a hit.

Lasky's sister Blanche, with whom he tramped in vaudeville, was being courted by a glove cutter named Sam Goldfish. Sam wanted to get into the infant movie industry, Lasky was reluctant.

Then DeMille announced he wanted to quit Broadway and head for the revolution in Mexico. Lasky didn't want to lose him, so he said: "If you want adventure, I've got an even better idea—let's make some movies."

They took in Goldfish and started their company with $20,000. When Lasky came to visit his budding film company, he discovered that Cecil had been in Odessa, Texas.

ered the hotel clerk had never heard of the Lasky company or of Cecil B. DeMille. But he offered this help: "Drive down this main road (Hollywood Boulevard) till you come to Vine Street. You can't miss it—it's a dirt road with a row of pepper trees right down the middle. Follow the pepper trees till you see an old barn. There's some movie folks working there that might know where your company is."

The barn was where DeMille was shooting "The Squaw Man." Goldwyn, who underwent a name-change and married Lasky's sister (they were later divorced), left the company when it merged with Adolph Zukor's Famous Players. The reason: Zukor and Goldwyn couldn't get along. Goldwyn sold out for $900,000 and started his brilliant career as an independent.

DeMille also followed an independent course, though he stayed with Famous Players-Lasky. He made films without studio interference, turning out the first "The Commandments" among other hits. But the eastern moguls balked at DeMille's lavishness and forced him out of the company in 1924. Lasky hung on as studio head until 1932, when he was ousted.

Though he had lost his fortune in the stock market crash, Lasky came back strong as an independent producer, beginning a 25-year career of selling to the studios projects he fervently believed.

Matter of FACT

The custom of men tipping their hats comes from the fact that a warrior, when entering a house, removed his helmet and extended his hand. By removing the helmet, he expressed confidence in his host. By extending his hand he showed he was not concealing any weapons, such as a knife.

Research on Bows, Arrows Locked Up

WASHINGTON (AP)—Congress was told today information about bows and arrows is still locked up as secret government data.

Dr. Wallace A. Brodie, science adviser to the secretary of state, said in testimony prepared for the House government information subcommittee, which is studying the effect of government secrecy policies on scientific development.

An outstanding physicist who had a hobby of archery was working during the war on high-level government projects. On the side he directed some experiments on possible development and use of bows and arrows. The results of his research on archery, as well as on physics, was classified for security and after the war he was unable to have the bow and arrow information declassified.

Brodie said that so far as he knows it is still classified, although his motive was merely to include in a popular lecture and a published article the general information that modern science might provide interesting improvement in this field.

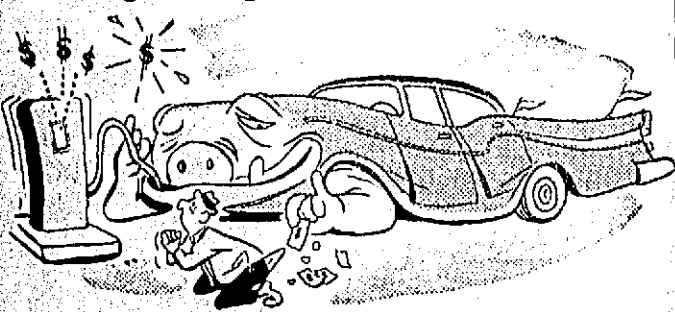

Brodie said security restrictions should for the most part be confined to strategic information and weapons developments, leaving basic research generally free. He

THIS is Texas Eastern

Just eleven years ago Texas Eastern took its first step as a fledgling corporation. Its immediate goal: the purchase and conversion of the war-built Big Inch and Little Big Inch pipelines to the transmission of natural gas.

Since February, 1947, Texas Eastern's interests in the petroleum industry have been greatly broadened and expanded. Today, Texas Eastern

- explores for, produces, purchases, processes and transports natural gas...
- explores for, produces and refines crude oil...
- transports petroleum products.

Texas Eastern's natural gas pipeline system—now 5900 miles long—spans 14 states between Mexico and the Northeast. Its pipelines, which supply natural gas used in millions of homes and thousands of factories, have a combined capacity of more than 1.7 billion cubic feet per day.

Texas Eastern's newly created "Little Big Inch Division" will soon be operating a 1700-mile petroleum products pipeline system. This new system—one of the nation's largest common carriers of petroleum products—links the refineries of the Gulf Coast, Ark-La-Tex and Mid-Continent areas with major marketing areas of the Midwest.

The Company's Production Division and its recently-acquired subsidiary, La Gloria Oil and Gas Company, are exploring for oil and gas in a half dozen states. They have interests in over 600 producing oil and gas wells... and in thousands of acres of proved and semi-proved oil and gas areas.

Through La Gloria's ultramodern Tyler, Texas refinery, Texas Eastern is engaged in custom refining of aviation and automotive gasoline. La Gloria's giant gas cycling plant at Fallurus, Texas, further adds to Texas Eastern's diversification.

Through a company affiliate, Algonquin Gas Transmission Company, gas from the Texas Eastern system is sold in large areas of southern New England and as far north as Boston.

These operations have made Texas Eastern a truly versatile company, broadening its service to consumers of oil and gas as well as to the people who produce and process them.
